

Contents

Chapter 1. Ecological Systems and Social–Cognitive Theory as a Basis for Building Resiliency	1
The Ecological Systems Approach: Vital for Effective Prevention Programming	1
The Individual Viewed through a Systems Lens	3
Social Support Networks Link Individuals with Ecological Systems	4
The Influences of Microsystems	5
Culture and Community: Important Macrosystems	10
Mesosystems: The Connections among Systems	12
Key Resiliency Factors for Individuals, Families, Schools, Peers, and Community	12
Efficacy Underlies Key Resiliency Factors	13
The Role of Self-Esteem as a Resiliency Factor	16
Several Resiliency Factors Are Incorporated into Self- Responsibility	17
Decision-Making and Problem-Solving Are Important to Resiliency	21
Parent–Child Communication is a Key Resiliency Factor	26
Chapter 2. Ecological Systems and Social-Cognitive Development Theory Applied to Early Prevention Programming	29
Applying Systems Theory	29
The Individual Child Is Directly Involved	30
The Family System Is Involved	30
Support Systems Are Enhanced	31
Effective Programs Maintain Continuity of Interactions with the Family	31
Peer Support Systems Are Developed	32
Training for Teachers Includes the School System	32

Community Team Training Adds Interconnections	33
Cultural and Socioeconomic Macrosystems are Considered	33
Social-Cognitive Theory Guides the Promotion of Resiliency and Risk Reduction	34
Strategies to Enhance Efficacy Beliefs and Self-Esteem	35
Development of Self-Responsibility Is a Major Component	35
Families Learn Decision-Making and Problem-Solving Skills	37
Social and Communication Skills Are Included in the Curriculum	38
 Chapter 3. DARE to be You Children's Program	41
Development of the Children's Component	41
Program for 2- to 5-Year-Old Children	42
Self-Esteem/Self-Efficacy	43
Activities for Self-Responsibility	44
Decision Making and Problem Solving	45
Social and Communication Skills	46
Early Childhood Curriculum	46
Self-Efficacy/Self-Esteem	47
Self-Responsibility	47
Decision-Making, Communication, and Social Skills and Substance Abuse Awareness	48
Curriculum for Middle and Late Childhood (Grades 3–5)	48
Curriculum for Early Adolescence (Grades 6–8)	49
Program Component for Late Adolescence (Peer Curriculum)	50
 Chapter 4. DARE to be You Family Program	53
Recruitment of Target Population	53
Retention Strategies	55
Family Class Logistics	56
Staff Training	56
Parent–Child Activities	58
Parent Classes	59
Self-Efficacy/Self-Esteem	60
Self-Responsibility	61
Decision-Making and Problem-Solving Skills	62
Communication and Social Skill Development	63
Future Orientation	65
 Chapter 5. DARE to be You Community Team and School Training	67
Community Training to Support the DARE to be You Family/ Preschool Program	67

Community Team Training as Capacity Building for Working with Youth	68
Educational Objectives of Community Team Training	68
DARE to be You Strategies	69
Ideas for Creating a Positive Environment	71
School Training	72
School Component to Support the DARE to be You Family Program	72
School Components for Elementary, Middle, and High School Programs	74
 Chapter 6. The Impact of DARE to be You	75
Who Participated in the Program Evaluation?	76
How Were Families Recruited into the Program?	76
What Risk Factors Did the Families Have?	76
How Did the Sites Differ?	77
How Were the Families Followed over Time?	78
How Was DARE to be You Implemented?	79
How Did Participants Perceive the Program?	80
How Did the DTBY Staff View the Program?	81
How Was the Program Perceived by Community Agencies?	82
What Key DTBY Concepts Should Be Transmitted for Program Replication?	83
Did DARE to be You Have an Impact on Families?	85
Are the Measures Appropriate for Diverse Families?	85
What Changes Occurred in Parent Self-Appraisals?	86
How Were Changes in Self-Responsibility Measured?	86
Did the Program Affect Self-Responsibility?	89
How Were Child-Rearing Practices Measured?	90
Do Parents Actually Change the Way They Raise Their Children as a Result of DTBY?	92
How Did Children Benefit?	92
How Did the Intervention Affect Stress and Social Support	95
Did DARE to be You Help Some Families More Than Others?	98
How Well Does the Program Work for Families Who Vary in Risk?	99
Does the Program Affect Family Processes?	100
Do Variations in Implementation Alter Program Benefits?	101
Do Interventionists and Evaluators Make Strange Bedfellows?	104
What Activities Enhance this Relationship?	105

Chapter 7. How Can a Community or Agency Determine If It Can Successfully Implement the DARE to be You Program? ... 107

Assessing the Resources Necessary to Implement the Program 107

Who is Involved in the Program? 107

 The Sponsoring Agency or Organization 107

 Key Staff 109

 Basic Program Resources 112

 The Bottom Line 114

Chapter 8. Conclusion 115

References 117